Tabs point to workspaces. My Workspace is your personal area, other tabs are team workspaces. All teams that you are a member of are displayed.

Home in My Workspace provides an area for notes for personal reference. The notes and announcements in Home in a team workspace are available to the whole team.

Menu on the left lists capabilities available in this workspace.

CMCS Explorer is a data management tool for accessing data across DAV resources.

The default address in CMCS Explorer for My Workspace is the path to your personal data folder. In a team workspace, the default address points to the team's data folder.

CMCS Explorer shows tree and file views, can spawn viewers and tools for specific files, and has search, notification and pedigree capabilities.

(Nov 01, 2002 11:04 am)Carmen Pancerella: A bit quiet around here today ...
(Oct 31, 2002 03:08 pm)David Leahy: Anyhow we can take this up in email.
(Oct 31, 2002 03:07 pm)David Leahy: We could fully integrate with AT. I thought that we wanted AT-style data files that distilled Theresa 'n' Eric's data, and this would be part of the demo? So whether we use the AT service or not, we need the AT-style GuestNotes.
(Oct 31, 2002 03:04 pm)Karen Schuchardt: Eric has a full schema that the data can be extracted from. I was thinking we could set up a notification event to generate the data on the fly.
Alternatively we talked about a more realistic AT integration. Is that completely out the window at this point?
(Oct 31, 2002 02:40 pm)David Leahy: And vibrational frequencies and such; but no reaction info, no other species involved?
(Oct 31, 2002 02:39 pm)David Leahy: Hiya. I'm getting going on your Active Tables "GuestNotes" for vinoxy. You just need to provide an enthalpy to AT, right?
(Oct 31, 2002 02:33 pm)Karen Schuchardt: I'm here
(Oct 31, 2002 02:28 pm)David Leahy: Hi Karen?
(Oct 31, 2002 10:50 am)David Leahy: Have fun Carmen et al!
(Oct 31, 2002 10:49 am)Carmen Pancerella: Will be back after Trick or Treating
